THE PAN AFRICAN CHARITY NETWORK

Leading African diaspora in the field of Charity Funding

Since our founding in 2010, we have been gradually building a network which permits us to harness the global intellectual capacity of Africans in the Diaspora and friends of Africa in order to promote business and economic development across the continent and the communities in which we live. EXPAND YOUR HORIZON

There are several organizations and initiatives working towards the same goals, and each one of them has its own way of contributing to gender equity in the aid industry. Learn more about them by following the links below:

CHS Alliance : the alliance has done a lot of work in prevention and response to sexual violence in the humanitarian context.

Code Blue: this campaign is working to put an end to sexual abuse by United Nations Personnel.

The Headington Institute: the Institute works for aid worker well-being and sexual assault is one of their evolving areas of research.

Cassandra Complexity blog : this blog discusses gender-based violence as it relates to humanitarian interventionszzzzzz
